Inform'Elles Survey Summary

A survey was distributed by Inform'Elles to organizations in British Columbia (BC) to understand what supports and resources are available for French-speaking clients who have experienced gender-based violence (GBV) and how organizations who serve these clients could be better supported. The survey findings will be used to support program development within Inform'Elles. The survey was sent to 46 contacts at 34 organizations and was completed by 20 respondents (response rate of 43%). This document summarises the feedback collected from 20 respondents* from 19 organizations in BC.

French services offered by these organizations

The majority of respondents (8 out of 11) said that their organization offers services in French

3 out of 11 of respondents reported their organization does not offer services in French to clients but would like to.

Organizations who do not offer services in French identified that they either never serve French clients or that there is no demand. One respondent was unsure of how frequently their organization served French clients.

Respondents cited lack of capacity and difficulty recruiting qualified staff as challenges that prevent their organization from offering French services.

* 1 organization had 2 respondents within different departments answer the survey. Another organization had a respondent complete the survey twice – the respondent's most recent answers were included in the analysis

Another organization had 2 respondents within different departments answer the survey but one respondent said the organization does not provide GBV services and they do not want supports. This respondent was excluded from the analysis.

Addressing French-speaking clients' needs

What are the main needs of the French-speaking clients your organization serves? (n=5)

The most commonly identified need/barrier of French-speaking clients was related to accessing services in their language.

Respondents also identified needs related to status in Canada, food, and culturally specific needs. One respondent said their French-speaking clients did not have different needs from their other clients. Primary need is for the ability to communicate in French in order to fully understand their rights and options, so they can make informed decisions.

If an organization is unable to answer a French-speaking client's questions or meet their needs in French, they... (n=8)

Refer them to another organization (e.g. VictimLink, Francophone Society) (n=5)

Connect them with a translation organization or arrange an interpreter (n=3)

Connect them with a French-speaking person in community (respondent noted this is less common due to confidentiality) (n=1)

Organizations not offering GBV prevention and support services (n=9)

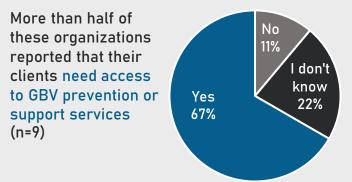

8 out of 9 organizations are francophone organizations (The non-francophone organization does produce written materials in French when they can access funding for this)

33% of respondents reported that their organization offers services for health and wellbeing and settlement and integration services for immigrants and refugees (n=9)

44% Other: See Appendix

Note: Respondents were asked to select all that apply; percentages add up to greater than 100 in this question.

If organizations are unable to respond a client's questions or needs regarding GBV, 100% refer them to other organizations/services (e.g. Inform'Elles, Réseau-Femmes, provincial health services, local resources, services offered in English or French) (n=8)

Interest in accessing supports for all organizations

100% of respondents from GBV prevention and support organizations reported their organization would be interested in accessing supports to better serve French-speaking clients (n=10)

What supports would be most helpful? (n=10)

What challenges do organizations face in serving French-speaking clients? (n=4)

One respondent that has access to interpreters through a contactor highlighted that while their organization does not serve many French-speaking clients, they have experienced challenges when hiring interpreters. A respondent whose organization has dedicated staff responsible for serving French-speaking clients indicated that there are not enough French-speaking staff to serve French speaking women in situations of violence.

80%

One respondent expressed a need for their organization to build partnerships and to be aware of available services and supports to be able to refer clients. Another respondent who has access to interpreters, French/bilingual staff and refers clients to other services and organizations explained that their organization may have challenges if they had an influx of French-speaking clients.
